The TEAM Prompts

Get your evenings back.

Brief ChatGPT or Claude the way you'd brief a new hire, and hand off the messages that pull you back in after hours.

BEFORE YOU START

Hey,

Quick thing before you dive in.

If you've ever typed a quick question into ChatGPT and gotten back something that sounded like a robot wrote it, the fix is a better brief.

That's how I look at all of it now. I spent eight years behind a chair training stylists, and years after that onboarding teams in ops. Nobody does good work on day one without a real brief. AI works the same way.

This guide is about the stuff that follows you home. The texts, the same five questions, the voice memos you swear you'll write up later. You can hand a lot of that off tonight.

Start with the self-check on the next page. Be honest with it.

SELF-CHECK

WORDS ON THIS PAGE

Hand off
Giving a task to someone, or something, so it stops landing on you.

Time
About a minute

You need
A pen, or your notes app

01 · SELF-CHECK

Five honest answers.

Write a number or a word next to each one. Nobody sees this page but you.

01 How many client texts or DMs did you answer after 8pm this week?

02 How many times did you type an answer you've typed before?

03 If a lead messaged you right now, how long would they wait to hear back?

04 What did you do today that someone else could do if it were written down?

05 When was your last evening off without checking your phone?

Circle the answer that bugged you most. That's the first thing to hand off, and the next pages show you how.

THE BRIEF

WORDS ON THIS PAGE

Prompt
Whatever you type or say to the AI.

Brief
A prompt with enough detail that someone new could do the job well.

Time
About 3 minutes

Brief it like a new hire.

Anthropic, the company behind Claude, tells people to treat it as "a brilliant but new employee who lacks context on your norms and workflows." TEAM is the brief you'd give that person.

T Task

Say what you need done and who it's for.

> Write a text back to a new client who asked if I have Saturday openings.

E Explain

Give the background and the reason. The reason helps it make choices you never spelled out.

> I'm booked two weeks out. She found me on Instagram. I'd like her to book without feeling pushed.

A Ask

Invite it to ask you questions first, and give it permission to say it doesn't know.

> Ask me anything you need before you write it. If you're unsure of a fact, say so.

M Model

Show it one example of good work and the shape you want back.

> Three short sentences, like this text I sent last week: [paste one you liked].

QUICK ASK

Reply to this client.

TEAM BRIEF

All four lines above, in one message. It takes about a minute longer to write, and the first answer usually needs far fewer fixes.

SOP
Standard operating procedure. Written steps for a task, so anyone can do it.

Time
About 15 minutes

03 · START HERE

Talk it out tonight.

Pick a task you explain over and over. Record yourself walking through it, the way you'd teach someone new, and let AI write the steps.

1. Open the voice memo app on your phone and talk through the task for two to five minutes. Say the why behind each step.
2. If your memo app shows a transcript, copy it. If it doesn't, open ChatGPT or Claude, tap the mic in the chat box and talk there instead.
3. Paste the transcript under the prompt below and send it.

COPY THIS

T You're helping me train a new team member at my [type of business]. Below is a transcript of me explaining how I [the task]. Turn it into numbered steps someone could follow on day one.

E They'll read this on their phone, and most of them have never done this job before, so plain words matter more than polish.

A Before you write it, ask me about anything unclear. If a step seems to be missing, say so instead of filling it in.

M Keep my wording where you can. One step per line, under 20 words each.

> MEGAN'S TIP
> We recommend saving the finished steps somewhere your team already looks, like a shared note or your team chat, because steps nobody can find tend to get skipped.

Bracket
A [blank] you fill in with your own details before you send.

Lead
Someone who reached out but hasn't booked yet.

Time
About 2 minutes each

Five more, ready to copy.

Each one is already written as a TEAM brief. Fill in the brackets and send it.

02 Reply to a new lead

When someone messages and you can't answer properly right now.

COPY THIS

T You're the front desk for my [type of business] in [city]. A new lead just messaged: [paste their message]. Write a reply I can send as a text.

E I want to answer their question and get them to one next step: [book a call / book at this link]. Here's what I share by text and what I save for a call: [your rule, like pricing].

A Ask me anything you need first. If you're unsure of a fact, leave it in [brackets] for me.

M Three short sentences, warm and direct, like this text I've sent before: [paste one you liked].

03 Saved replies for the questions you get every week

When you catch yourself typing the same answer again.

COPY THIS

T I run a [type of business]. Here are the questions clients ask me most, with how I usually answer: [paste or talk through 5 to 10]. Turn each one into a saved reply.

E They go out by text and DM, so each one has to read easily on a lock screen.

A Ask me about anything that looks out of date. Where an answer depends on price or availability, leave a [bracket].

M The question in bold, then the reply in two sentences or less.

Draft

A first version you read and adjust before anything goes out.

04 Follow up when someone goes quiet

When a lead asked, you answered, and nothing came back.

COPY THIS

T Write a follow-up text to [name], who asked about [service] on [day] and hasn't replied.

E The last thing I sent was [paste it]. I'd like to check in in a way that makes it easy to say yes or not right now.

A Ask me if you need anything else.

M Under 40 words, friendly, ending with one simple question.

05 Answer a review

Good or bad, the people reading it are your next clients.

COPY THIS

T Here's a review a client left for my [type of business]: [paste the review]. Write a public reply from me.

E Future clients will read it more than this one will, so it has to sound like a real owner. If the review is unhappy, own what's fair and offer to talk directly at [phone or email].

A Ask me first if any detail in the review needs context from me.

M Two to four sentences. Calm, no exclamation points.

06 Turn tonight's brain dump into tomorrow's plan

Five minutes before bed, so it stops circling in your head.

COPY THIS

T Here's everything on my mind about tomorrow, in no order: [talk it out with the mic]. Turn it into a plan for my day.

E My fixed appointments tomorrow are [list them]. Sort the rest into what has to happen tomorrow and what can wait, and flag anything someone else could do.

A Ask me about anything you can't place.

M A short list I can read in 30 seconds.

BRIEF IT ONCE

WORDS ON THIS PAGE

Project
A saved space in ChatGPT or Claude with its own standing instructions.

Instructions
The brief the AI reads before every chat in that project.

Time
About 10 minutes, once

Stop re-explaining your business.

Put your standing brief in a project once. Every chat inside that project starts already knowing it.

I run a [type of business] in [city]. My clients are [who they are]. I write like [how you talk: short, warm, a little funny]. When you're not sure of a fact, say so and leave a [bracket]. Ask me questions before you start anything big.

In ChatGPT

Open your project from the sidebar, tap the three-dot menu at the top right and add instructions. Paste the brief and save.

In Claude

Open Projects, start a new project and click Set project instructions. Paste the brief and save.

WHAT'S LEFT

WORDS ON THIS PAGE

Diagnostic
My Wealth Media's starting point with an owner: a free 30-minute call.

Time
As long as you need

Once AI writes the drafts, what's still running through you?

Write it down. Be specific.

THE DIAGNOSTIC

That answer is where we start.

It begins with a free 30-minute call about what's still landing on you. If you want the full picture after that, there's a written report with a plan for what to fix first.
